

MANAGING DIFFICULT PEOPLE

(AND GOOD ONES TOO)

A DAY COURSE
IN SOLVING
PEOPLE ISSUES
IN YOUR PRACTICE

SKILLS - KNOWLEDGE - SOLUTIONS - CONFIDENCE

CONTENT

The best assets of any organisation are its people. Is that true of your practice? Do members of your team lack commitment? Do you need to learn how to build loyalty to you and to the practice?

The Managing Difficult People course is designed to help principal dentists and practice managers tackle people problems and deal confidently with colleagues.

With the right training, we believe anyone can acquire the skills to manage their staff, difficult ones included.

During the day we cover:

- Employment law, the pitfalls and how to avoid them
- How to tackle poor performance
- Giving constructive feedback to get the results you need

By the end of this course, you will feel empowered to deal with your difficult employees straightaway.

Got a difficult situation in your practice? Book a place on the course and plan what steps to take with our support.

7 hours verifiable CPD

MEET THE TUTORS

Our combined experience will help you turn around working relationships in your practice and improve business prospects.

Sheila Scott has worked in the dental field for more than 20 years. With a Psychology degree and business management experience, she advises dental practices on conversions to private practice, on fee pricing, patient management and how to get the most out of your team. She began collaborating with Hayley Bloodworth after seeing too many practices undermined by friction amongst the staff.

Hayley Bloodworth is the Managing Partner of Proactive Employment Lawyers. With a background in commercial litigation, she has specialised in employment law for nearly 15 years. She is increasingly involved in helping her clients solve workforce problems to avoid unnecessary litigation and distress. She is known for taking a practical and unstuffy approach to the law and has delivered courses on employment law and management training to a wide range of organisations.

TESTIMONIALS

Situations defused by previous Managing Difficult People courses:

A principal dentist attended the course because her practice manager was uncooperative and difficult. The dentist was looking for help with making the manager redundant because she believed it was the only way forward.

To the dentist's surprise, she went back empowered to tackle the situation head on; by discussing her expectations, she helped the manager define the standards she wanted from the rest of the team. Within three months they had formal job descriptions for all staff and a shared understanding of rules and values. Meanwhile, a practice manager on the same course was having problems with one of the dentists in the practice. With our support, the manager had a discussion with the associate who changed the way he spoke to his colleagues.

Another dentist on the course was having the kind of problem with a colleague which leads to a breakdown in trust. Usually, we can turn around difficult situations but occasionally, as in this case, a parting of the ways is inevitable and requires careful handling, supported by legal advice. Act in haste, repent at leisure is never truer than in relation to employment law.

COMMENTS

These are the kinds of comments we have received from our delegates:

"I can now tackle ongoing issues which should have been solved before!"

"Thought provoking to say the very least. We will now put in place management systems that will improve our everyday life"

"Focussed my mind on what I need to do to get the best out of my team"
